

The Delta State University/Hinds Community College Partnership (DHP) for Child Development Program

General Information

Instruction is usually provided in a hybrid format. Though coursework is primarily online, face-to-face will be scheduled at the discretion of the professor on the Hinds Community College campus and again through Canvas, an electronic virtual classroom. Students access the virtual classroom through a personal computer equipped with a camera and microphone. These classes are usually held between 5:00 – 7:00 p.m. and 7:15 – 9:15 p.m. to accommodate working students. Occasionally, meetings are held on Saturdays.

Students must participate in field experiences in metro-area child development centers which have been approved by DSU faculty. These experiences must be completed during the school day to complete instructional requirements for specific courses.

The final semester is the student internship, and requires 400 clock hours (6 credit hours) of internship in an approved metro-area child development center. Students are limited to six other credit hours of class work that semester.

Students who seek state licensure to teach in the public schools up through kindergarten must meet the following requirements:

- An overall g.p.a. of 3.0
- An ACT composite of 21 or a Praxis/CASE passing score

Transfer Hours

DSU requires completion of 62 hours of specific courses; however, you may transfer additional hours that might apply to elective areas. Your transcript evaluation will provide additional information.

Admissions Checklist for Child Development 2+2 Program

- MEET YOUR DIRECTOR—Terry R. Parrish is the Director of the Delta State University/Hinds Community College Elementary Education 2+2 Program and Child Development 2+2 Program.
